Key Questions:

Does your state have statewide or city/county level building code adoption authority? Or a hybrid?

What is the current status of RRNC in your state building code?

Are there local jurisdictions with RRNC?

Where is RRNC required by policy in your state? (Examples: HUD financed Multifamily Military Housing, Other?)

Has your program undertaken any efforts to achieve Appendix F or radon resistant new construction in state/local codes?

What cities/counties would present the greatest opportunity for achieving code implementation and why? Some factors to consider: population, radon zone, new construction starts, building code adoption schedule, champions or advocates and radon services available
